

perpendicular to the cornea to compensate for the curvature of the cornea that will be especially leveraged as we scan larger areas of the cornea, up to a 9 mm x 9 mm surface.

Acknowledgment

For this research, we acknowledge the support from the II-VI Foundation and Research to Prevent Blindness. We thank Sydor Optics for their partnership in optical manufacturing and Eric Clarkson and Matthew Kupinski acknowledge the NIH grants RC1-EB010974 and R37-EB000803 targeted at task-based image quality assessment for medical imaging, which have played in synergy with the science reported in this paper.